John Bunyan's Cottage. Elstow is a pretty little village close to Bedford, famous in the first place as the site of a noted Benedictine priory, and more recently as the birthplace of John Bunyan, the famous "tinker of Bedford" and the author of the "Pilgrim's Progress." Many places are pointed out to the interested tourist as connected with his memory, notably his birthplace, the house where he lived, the tower in which he engaged in bell-ringing, and the ruins of the village cross near to which he was playing when the Call from Heaven reached him.
